

The German Development Institute / Deutsches Institut für Entwicklungspolitik (DIE) is one of the leading research institutes on development policy. Through excellent research, policy advice and training, the Institute contributes to finding solutions to global challenges.

For the project “Green Economy” within the Programme “Transformation of Economic and Social Systems” we seek one

Researcher (m/f)

Salary according to German public service tariff (TVöD 13)
(part time, 70%)

From € 33.500 gross p.a. up to € 43.000 gross p.a. depending on qualifications;

Subject to financing approval, the position shall be filled as soon as possible and is limited until 31 December 2020.

The person will work on the transformation of national and international financial systems towards economic, social, and ecological sustainability to which the international community has committed within the Paris Declaration and the Agenda 2030. As a member of an interdisciplinary team, she/he will contribute through research and policy advice to international debates on green finance. Her/his focal areas will be on innovative financial instruments, regulation and policies to incentivize green and disincentivize polluting investments, such as green funds, environmental fiscal reforms, carbon pricing or carbon disclosure rules. It is possible and desirable to write a PhD thesis.

Qualifications and requirements:

- Very good Master's degree in economics or social sciences with a focus on economics;
- Proven knowledge and research experience in the area of green finance and financial system development (national and international financial systems); Fluent spoken and written English, good command of German language is preferable;
- Proven knowledge in quantitative research methods would be an asset;
- Willingness and aptness to travel abroad, including countries with a tropical climate (“Tropentauglichkeit”).

The German Development Institute / Deutsches Institut für Entwicklungspolitik (DIE) offers an inspiring, family-friendly working environment at the interface of research and policy advice, with ample opportunities to engage in international discussions, political processes and scientific debates.

In the case of equal qualification, physically challenged persons will be given preference.

For further questions, please contact Dr. Kathrin Berensmann.

When applying, please note the position number 2019-B-01. Applications only by portal, including all necessary documents (motivation letter, CV, relevant certificates), should be submitted by 21 January 2019 at: Applicationportal

Deutsches Institut für Entwicklungspolitik (DIE)
Tulpenfeld 6, 53113 Bonn/Germany
Tel.: +49 (0)228 94927-0 | DIE@die-gdi.de
www.die-gdi.de | www.facebook.com/DIE.Bonn

